

1 Corinthians 1:4-17

PERSONALITIES AND THE CROSS

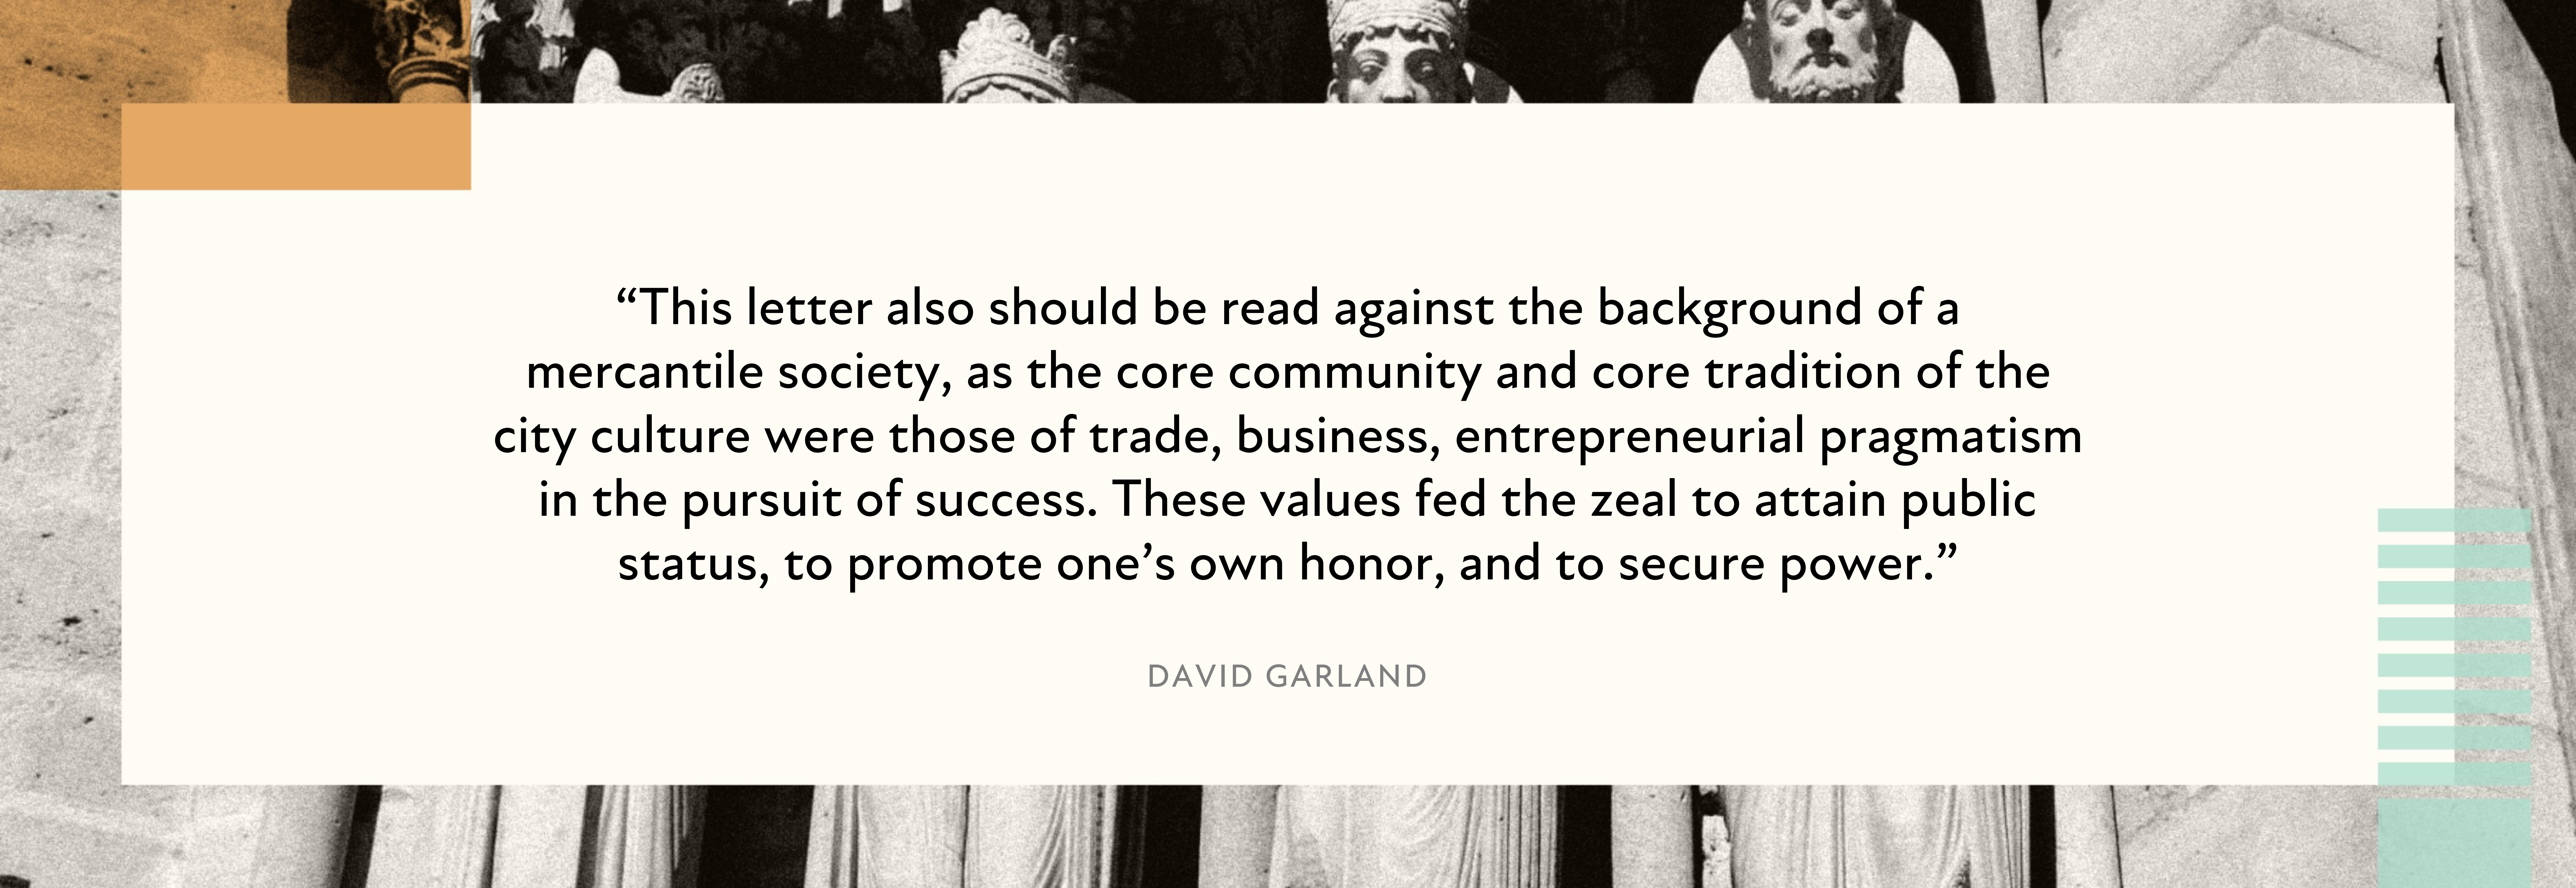

“When Paul came to Corinth to begin his missionary activity, the city teemed with commerce as the vital link between Rome and its eastern provinces, attracting traders from everywhere in the empire.”

DAVID GARLAND

“This letter also should be read against the background of a mercantile society, as the core community and core tradition of the city culture were those of trade, business, entrepreneurial pragmatism in the pursuit of success. These values fed the zeal to attain public status, to promote one’s own honor, and to secure power.”
